

The American Consulate General in Jerusalem Announces The 2016 Middle East Partnership Initiative Leaders for Democracy Fellowship Program

The American Consulate General in Jerusalem, the Office of the U.S.-Middle East Partnership Initiative (MEPI), and the U.S. Department of State's Bureau of Near Eastern Affairs Office of Assistance Coordination (NEA/AC) are pleased to announce the tenth year of its Leaders for Democracy Fellowship (LDF) program. This program advances leadership capacities in the Middle East and North Africa by providing emerging civic leaders the opportunity to spend over three months in the United States (for high-proficiency English speakers) to gain academic skills and practical experience as well as Networking opportunities with like-minded peers and professionals.

The LDF program will take place in the United States from September to December 2016. Fellows will travel to the United States, where they will attend a five week academic component at the University of Virginia (UVA) in Charlottesville, Virginia. Program participants will subsequently be placed in host organizations aligned with their professional interests for a nine week practicum experience in Washington, D.C.

This project provides emerging and mid-career civic leaders from the Middle East and North Africa with the opportunity to complete an academic training at the University of Virginia and gain relevant professional experience within a practicum host organization in Washington, D.C.

To promote program sustainability and create a multiplier effect, participants will create and implement follow-on projects in their home communities. Action plans for the follow-on projects will be developed and finalized throughout the course of the program.

Academic Component: The LDF program begins with five weeks of academic training on leadership, peace and conflict mitigation, comparative politics, civic engagement, advocacy, communication, and change management, among other topics. Fellows are expected to be active participants in all seminars, workshops and activities including theoretical debates and active skills-building sessions. Fellows are also expected to participate in group work, lead discussions and make presentations to the other Fellows in their cohort and to the broader UVA community.

Internship Component: After completing the academic portion of the program, each participant will engage in a nine-week practicum placement within a relevant non-governmental or public policy organization in Washington, D.C. Through this component, participants will gain practical work experience and learn about the ways that such organizations interact with government and civil society. Fellows will also gain valuable knowledge, experience, skills and further professional contacts to benefit their respective professional pursuits back home.

For each Fellow the internship component will culminate in the development and finalization of a project or deliverable of benefit to both the Fellow and the organization. These will be presented and shared with the rest of the cohort at the end of the component.
